

5 ways with pegs!

Peg puppets: Bring your clothes pegs to life by jazzing them up! Sticking some paper eyes you make and adding spare ribbon or tinsel you have made your puppet pal! Try some festive storytelling; maybe the peg puppet is an elf on an adventure or a penguin looking for their reindeer friend!

Wee ones can explore their schematic play and pegs are the perfect present for this. Whether wooden or plastic, there's plenty of joy playing with pegs.

Pick up list: There's plenty of tidying to do this time of year! Make it a little more fun using pegs. Can your wee one pick up any festive wrappers with pegs? Or maybe a sock or even an envelope? An exciting way to get tidy while also engaging fine motor skills and the transportation schema.

Peg presents: Spread a little bit of festive cheer. Have your wee one make or find a gift for the outside world – maybe a drawing, some lovely ribbon, a paper snowflake, or a special leaf. Then, peg the gift to a tree or bush on your next winter walk & bring some joy to your local area.

Jewellery making: Try clipping the pegs to each other to make a funky necklace or bracelet. Wee ones can gift the peg-jewellery to their loved ones (or themselves!). Any peg-creations you don't fancy wearing make for lovely decorations all year round.

Peg Parcels: Wrap up an object using tin foil or an old t-shirt and use pegs to fasten it shut. Pass it over to your wee one to let them unpeg it. Bring a little bit of festive magic and develop that connecting and disconnecting schema while doing so.
